YOUR SIGNATURE 山田太郎 ⑬ Day Month Year 2 4 1 2 2 0 1 3 ⑭		Don't leave your super in Australia If you worked in Australia on a temporary resident visa (including subclasses 405 and 410), you can claim your superannuation once you've departed Australia and your visa has ceased to be in effect. The easiest way to claim is via a free online application from the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) that also confirms your immigration status. Alternatively, you can claim directly from your fund. You will need to provide evidence of having left Australia. If you are claiming: • over AUD$5,000 in super, a Certification of Immigration Status from the Department of Immigration and Citizenship is required (this currently incurs a fee), or • AUD$5,000 or less in super, a certified copy of a passport port and date stamp issued on departure and a copy of the expired or cancelled eligible visa is required. You will need to request the passport stamp on departing Australia as the Australian Customs and Border Protection Service no longer automatically issues these departure stamps. Alternatively, you will need to obtain a Certification of Immigration Status . To access the free online application and for further information, go to ato.gov.au/departaustralia . You can also find any lost or ATO-held super by visiting ato.gov.au/superseeker . MAKE SURE YOU HAVE COMPLETED BOTH SIDES OF THIS CARD.
